PREFATORY NOTE

This is the fourth of a series of Educational Pamphlets which the Department of Education publishes from time to time. The first and second of the series, The Montessori Method and Industrial, Technical, and Art Education, were called "Bulletins," but for the third (Reports of Visits to Schools in the United States) and succeeding numbers of the series the term "Educational Pamphlets" is substituted.

VISUAL AIDS IN THE TEACHING OF HISTORY

Under the head of visual aids in the teaching of history may be included historical wall pictures, small pictures, or picture post-cards for individual use or for use with the reflectoscope, lantern slides, reproductions of historic documents such as the Great Charter, models or plaster casts, maps, chronological charts, and collections of local material of historic interest. In the future, moving picture films may also be available for general class use.

The advantages gained by the use of visual aids in the teaching of history are, first, that they attract attention and heighten the interest of the student; second, that they correct and reinforce impressions made by hearing or reading; third, that in teaching matters of fact they give clearer and more detailed impressions and give them in much less time than would be possible through oral description.

In these days of moving picture shows, illustrated magazines, illustrated school books, and even illustrated daily papers, it is unnecessary to point out how greatly the use of visual aids attracts the interest of the student. The additional interest lent to the history lesson is a great practical gain. Many of the pictures in the following list, especially those which suggest action, are of use mainly for arousing the interest of younger pupils, to whom the first appeal must be made through the eye. Long before a child learns to read, he will ask to have pictures explained to him. While such pictures must be largely products of the artist's imagination, yet they contain much valuable historical material. Even their weaknesses may be turned to account, especially where we can compare different pictures on the same subject—in what points do the conceptions of the artists agree? in what do they differ? Which more probably accurate?

For all the classes of a school, however advanced they may be, pictures or lantern slides are invaluable for the teaching of any subject that seeks to present to the pupil the forms of concrete material, famous paintings, famous sculpture, castles, temples, monasteries, churches, pyramids, bridges, private dwellings, costumes, arms and armour, methods of conveyance, etc. What gives a better idea of the magnificence of the Court of Louis XIV than a series of pictures of the gardens and buildings of Versailles in his time? Such a series is published by the New England History Teachers' Association. How striking the contrast between our modern railway trains and the train of only eighty years ago as shown in the lantern slide of the first train that ran in Canada. It may often take an hour to describe imperfectly what a picture or lantern slide would make clear in five minutes. The movable unframed pictures have, too, a great advantage over illustrations in books or over lantern slides, inasmuch as they can be shown in series simultaneously. A much clearer idea can be given of, say, the progress of architecture in Great Britain by showing side by side, in chronological order, a series of pictures of typical buildings of the various epochs.

The use of pictures and lantern slides in teaching history should be largely incidental, and should take up hardly any of the time of the class. A new picture hung early in the morning in some accessible place near the level of the pupil's eye will be examined probably by all during the day: a passing reference, a question or two to suggest points to be noticed may be all the time devoted to it in the class. Other pictures, large enough to be seen clearly by all the class, may be used as bases for lessons in composition.

The smaller pictures that cost only a cent or two each should be purchased in sets, one for each member of the class, or pupils may be encouraged to purchase them for themselves. Two or three such sets may be purchased for the price of one book and would probably be used much oftener. With younger pupils, however, it is much easier to concentrate attention on certain points by using one large picture to which the teacher may point and feel sure that, as he speaks, all are observing the same thing. These smaller pictures and picture post-cards may best be displayed by the use of the balopticon or projection lantern with reflectoscope attachment. Even the lantern slides may be used for incidental teaching, now that it is possible to display slides in a room light enough for pupils to use their pencils. There will be many occasions, however, when it will be well to take the whole period for lantern work, particularly in review or in the study of social history, to show, for instance, the development of architecture, arms and armour, costumes, methods of conveyance on land and sea, etc. Teachers who wish additional information that will add very greatly to the interest of the classes in social history as illustrated by pictures and lantern slides, will find Barnard's Companion to British History in the Middle Ages, Clarendon Press, Oxford, a valuable work.

While it is well worth while to frame some pictures that have artistic as well as historic value, the pictures should for the most part be kept in portfolios and displayed only in connection with lessons on which they have a bearing. Variety stimulates attention and interest. How can the pictures best be displayed? A large thick sheet of millboard is portable, stiff, and very light, and the pictures may be pinned to it and so displayed on the ledge of the black-board; or they may be pinned to the burlap on the wall; or the top and the bottom may be held in place by being pinned to two planed laths, one of which has a loop to hang it by. A large notice-board might well be a feature of every school-room where history is taught. Here one can display not only pictures from the portfolio but illustrations from current newspapers and magazines—scenes, for instance, from the Balkan War, clipping on current events, maps and charts drawn by pupils, and even short pieces of poetry that bear on the lesson of the day.

Younger pupils should be encouraged to collect, either for themselves or for the school, materials that have, or may later have, historic interest. This is possible, particularly in connection with the study of current events. In one school the interest in such work and its recognition by the promise of a small bonus on the examination in history at the end of the term, resulted in the preparation by pupils of over eighty scrap-books of newspaper clippings, printed matter, illustrations, and cartoons, reproducing very faithfully the main events of the preceding year.

In many localities it may be possible to form quite extensive collections of local historical material. Many schools have done this. Such collections may include pictures from old magazines of events, then contemporary, for example, the Crimean War, or accounts of important events in contemporary newspapers. They may include pictures of old-fashioned domestic utensils, furniture, spinning-wheels, etc., Indian relics, photographs of local scenes as they appeared thirty years ago or more, and accounts of incidents in the history of the locality written by local men or reported by them. Such accounts and pictures frequently appear in the local papers and are well worth preservation. Some of the pupils' best scrap-books of current events added to from year to year would prove in time a most valuable addition to such an historical museum. Intelligent guidance in making such a collection will do a great deal to give a pupil a correct idea of the real nature and value of historical material and to cultivate a very real interest in the past.

If funds are available for the purchase of models, much interesting material in European and early world history may be obtained from Friedrich Rausch, Nordhausen, Germany, who manufactures reproductions of articles of interest in European museums. For example, a model of Gutenberg's Press complete, with type, can be purchased for 18 marks; also spinning-wheels, armour, weapons, domestic utensils, coins, models of architecture from the earliest times. Plaster casts and, generally, reproductions in plastic materials may be obtained from P. P. Caproni and Brother, 1914 Washington St., Boston, Mass., who publish an illustrated catalogue, or from C. Hennecke Company, North Pierce St., Milwaukee, Wisconsin (illustrated catalogue $1.00). Moving picture films on historical or industrial subjects can be rented from The General Film Company, 7 Front Street East, Toronto, or from The Canadian Film Exchange, Richmond Street West, Toronto. These firms sell moving picture machines.

Excellent catalogues of materials used in German schools can be obtained from G. E. Stechert and Co., 151-155 West 25th St., New York.

For aid in compiling the following lists, acknowledgments are due to the valuable article in The History Teachers' Magazine, Philadelphia, Vol. 4, No. 6.

The series includes pictures of English cathedrals and castles, and of buildings in Greece and Italy, including ancient and modern Rome, etc. They are made in two sizes, 6 inches by 8½ inches, and a large size either 9 inches by 15 inches or 10 by 13 inches, as the shape of the original requires. Ten of the standard size are sold for 25 cents, or 50 for $1.00; four of the large size are sold for 25 cents., or 20 for $1.00.

Perry Pictures Co., Malden, Mass. Their pictures vary in size and price as follows:

5½ inches by 8 inches, 1 cent each
Some 7 inches by 9 inches, 2 cents each
Some 10 inches by 12 inches, 5 cents each

This catalogue offers thousands of reproductions of famous pictures, many of which are of historic interest. The photographs of ancient and mediæval sculpture and architecture are particularly useful.

George P. Brown and Co., 38 Lovett Street, Beverly, Mass. Their list contains thousands of reproductions of the world's famous paintings of historical pictures, architecture, and sculpture. Regular size, on paper, 5½ inches by 8 inches, 1 cent each; 120 for $1.00; larger sizes cost respectively 2, 5, and 25 cents each.

The Prang Educational Co., Boston, Mass. They have carbon photographs, 28 inches by 38 inches, at $5.00, including such subjects as Westminster Abbey, Amiens Cathedral, Baptistery at Pisa, Parthenon, The Temple of Jupiter, The Colosseum, Rome, etc. They have also, in size 22 inches by 28 inches at $1.25, carbon photographs of many English cathedrals; others at $1.00.

The Soule Art Publishing Co., 500-510 Dudley Street, Roxbury Station, Boston, Mass. Part II. of PHOTOGRAPHIC REPRODUCTIONS contains about 3,000 reproductions of sculpture, architectural subjects, and miscellaneous views, arranged under countries. There are, for instance, over 100 views of London, England, 14 of the Tower; 25 of the Acropolis of Athens, etc. They are furnished in four sizes, varying from 4 inches by 5 inches to 12 inches by 15 inches, and cost, respectively, 15c., 30c., 80c., and $1.25, unmounted.

Atkinson, Mentzner, and Grover, 318 West Washington St., Chicago. Publishers of THE RHINE PRINTS. These are coloured pictures, varying in size from about 16 inches by 12 inches to about 39 inches by 27 inches, and costing from $1.25 to $3.00 each. They include such subjects as the Acropolis, the Temple of Paestum, London Bridge.

Horace K. Turner, Art Publishers, Oak Hill, Newton Centre, Boston, Mass. The Turner brown and gray prints include examples of famous buildings and master-pieces of sculpture and painting. Some can be supplied in hand-coloured prints. There are some 15 different sizes, varying from 8 inches by 10 inches, at $1.00; or hand-coloured at $5.00; to 50 inches by 70 inches, at $50.00 or hand-coloured at $100.00.

The Emery School Art Co., 372 Boylston St., Boston, Mass., publish sepia photographs varying in size from 10 inches by 12 inches to 40 inches by 60 inches, and in price from $1.25 to $32.00. These can also be obtained hand-painted if desired. Some of the many subjects are:
